Prue Acton 05/10

When Environment Minister Frank Sartor says "nothing is in the too hard basket" (Stateline 21.05.10) does he mean to tell Minister for forestry, Ian Macdonald, it's illegal to log koala habitats, Aboriginal Places and burial grounds on Mumbulla Mountain near Bega?

Or does Sartor not take these breeches and illegal logging seriously?

Or that Traditional Owners will again go away empty handed?

With the long running river red gum battle reaching a resolution this gives hope for common sense to prevail.

The government can no longer behind Regional forest Agreements signed off on by Bob Carr, who now says they are out dated.

And with the forestry industry on its knees because of over supply of blue gums, there is no excuse for logging native forests for woodchips.
